english.php which encoding to use?

Hallo,

when I translate lang/engsih.php in to Lithuanian language I get an error:

if I save file with notepad encodet with utf-8, i get an error message when trying to login:

Warning: Cannot modify header information - headers already sent by (output started at E:\WEBSITES\medicus.lt\phorum\include\lang\english.php:1) in E:\WEBSITES\medicus.lt\phorum\login.php on line 132 and I can't login.

On the other hand, when I save language file with notepad encoded as ANSI - I can't see Lithuanian letters in all words, that are in language file

Maybe somebody knows the reasen

Thanks

thats not a question of encoding. you have had empty chars or lines before the <?php in the beginning.

I have checked language file, but there is no empty chars or lines.

When I save the same file encoded as ansi - it works and I can log in. But I can't see Lithuanian letters in all translated words of template.

This is an old thread, but the problem may have been that PHP had problems include()'ing utf-8 encoded files. I have had this problem in the past - I don't know if newer versions of PHP can do it (I assume they can).
