

Phorum Support Forums / Announcements

What do you think about moving to GitHub?

---

Thomas Seifert / June 11, 2011 11:46AM

What do you think about moving to GitHub?

We are currently considering to move the custom subversion repository and the trac system to the integrated GitHub solution and are doing some test conversions and imports.

That would mean that we would use git instead of subversion and the github issues tracker instead of trac ticketing.

In our opinion it would be easier for others to participate in phorum development and overall easier to handle.

What is your opinion on this move?

---

Thomas Seifert

Phorum Development Team / Mysnip-Solutions.de

Custom Phorum and general software development
worry-free Phorum Hosting

---

Ambush Commander / June 11, 2011 01:11PM

Re: What do you think about moving to GitHub?

GitHub is great, though it doesn't necessarily subsume Trac ticketing. Decentralized VCSes are good, however!

HTML Purifier, standards-compliant HTML filtering

---

rfc / June 20, 2011 11:28AM

Re: What do you think about moving to GitHub?

I'm fully supporting the move. I've had nothing bad experience with trac over the years I was active providing patches, sometimes depending on an admin to fix something. Let alone what github provides others trying to imitate.

github FTW from my end :)

---

CBiLL / June 27, 2011 05:21AM

Re: What do you think about moving to GitHub?

Will it still allow me to like SVN up and down like always?

I am all for it as long it similar to the SVN

Bill

---

rfc / June 27, 2011 10:02AM

Re: What do you think about moving to GitHub?

Github provides SVN access transparently, see [\[github.com\]](#) . Depending on your specific needs that may be sufficient.

---